

The Political Process And The Future Of The Muslim World

Gailan Mahmood Ramiz

B.A. Princeton, M.A. Harvard, D.Phil. Oxford
Assoc. Prof. Political Science,
International Islamic University Malaysia

	Table of Contents
Dedication		vi
Acknowledgment		vii
Preface		viii
Introduction and Overview		1
Chapter I
What is Politics ?		15
Chapter II
The Dynamics and Development of the Concept of Politics		23
Chapter III
Politics and the Problems of Choice and Decision Making		27
A. Choice and Decision-Making : A Theoretical Framework		27
B. The Implications of Choice And Decision-Making : The Concrete case of Khilafa Al Rashida . Reasons for Civil War		30

C.	Choice and Decision-Making In a Revolutionary Situation	33
D.	Implication of Choice and Decision-Making at the levels of Representative Assemblies and the Electorate	34
	1. Decision-Making at the level of elected Assemblies	35
	2. Decision-Making at the level of the Electorate	36
Chapter IV
	The Separation of Politics from ethics and Their Linkage	39
Chapter V
	Is Political Science an Exact Science? The Implications to politics	53
A.	Politics as a Science	54
B.	The Implications to Politics of Whether - or how far - Politics is a science	58
1.	The First School: Politics as an Exact Science	58
2.	The Second School: Politics as not an Exact Science	62
Chapter VI
	The political process and the Islamic legal Order (Shari'a) and the State	65

A.	The Political Process and the Islamic legal Order (Shari'a)	66
B.	The Political Process and the Islamic State	73
1.	The Khilafa : Its Consensual and Contractual Nature	74
2.	The Political Process and the Principle of Shura	77
	i. The Roots of European Theory and Practice with respect to Representative Government	79
	ii. The Islamic Historical Experience with Respect to the Expression of the Will of the Political Community (Representative Government).	80
Chapter VII
	Summary and Conclusion	89
	Select Bibliography	92

Gailan Mahmood Ramiz