

ALAN CLARK

THE TORIES

CONSERVATIVES AND
THE NATION STATE 1922-1997

CONTENTS

---

Illustrations xi

Preface xiii

BOOK ONE

EVOLVING APPEASEMENT

- ONE      The Carlton Club and the New Conservatives    3
*The state of the nation – Disgruntled partners – Personalities manoeuvre –
The 'Second XI' – A surprising victory – Bonar Law in the saddle*
- TWO      Bonar Law Comes to Grief    15
Set fair for the Government – Trouble with the Treasurer – Bonar Law disappoints – is sent on holiday – and dies – Davidson's role – The conspiracy to thwart Curzon
- THREE    Stanley Baldwin Finds His Feet    25
*Baldwin to 'heal' Tory divisions – His political strategy – and miscalculation –
A Cabinet divided – A precipitate dissolution – and unexpected defeat*
- FOUR     An Unhappy Ship    37
Grandees uncomfortable in defeat – Illusory strength of the Liberals – Winston Churchill tacks to leeward – and is rewarded – The new Cabinet takes shape – Neville Chamberlain perplexed – Final humiliation of Curzon
- FIVE     The Gold Standard and its Consequences    47
*Churchill at the Exchequer – is charged with reverting to the gold standard – his doubts – Keynes's hesitations – A rapid deterioration in confidence –
Alternative courses of action are considered – A mismatch with party trade policy – The deed is done, but half-heartedly*
- SIX      The General Strike    58
*Bourgeois apprehensions – The plight of the coalminers – 'Red Friday' –
The Samuel Committee – Equivocal position of the TUC – The mood in Cabinet – Loss of control by the principals – Working-class solidarity – The forces of conciliation – The changed face of labour relations*

- SEVEN Stanley Baldwin Survives 72
The hunger for scapegoats – The intrusion of Lord Beaverbrook – Winston Churchill is unreliable – The economic climate worsens – as does the position of Stanley Baldwin – The Rothermere–Beaverbrook axis – The Party Chairman ‘resigns’ – The Topping Report – An impulsive decision – is soon corrected
- EIGHT Economic Crisis and ‘National’ Government 84
The Conservative Party recovers its equilibrium – Ramsay MacDonald in difficulties – The May Committee – ‘Talks’ with the Tories – The Fleet mutinies – End of the sovereign – Landslide at the general election
- NINE Foreign Affairs 98
Problems with the Versailles settlement – Mussolini is troublesome – The Hoare–Laval Pact – The arrival of Anthony Eden – The Rhineland – Appeasement, a respectable policy – Baldwin’s days are numbered
- TEN The Abdication 106
A badly behaved Prince – The Establishment is apprehensive – HRH becomes infatuated – A dilemma is posed – The temperature rises – Stanley Baldwin takes his opportunity
- ELEVEN Diplomatic Disappointments 120
Chamberlain now Prime Minister – First hint of problems with Churchill – Old Baldwinites purged from the Cabinet – Resentment – ‘Bouncing’ Hore-Belisha – International affairs, the ‘Establishment’ view – Lothian, Lloyd George – The Spanish Civil War – The pressures of Lebensraum – The Sudeten dilemma – ‘Peace in Our Time’
- TWELVE Munich to Outbreak of War 134
A sigh of relief – Economic overtures – Hitler annexes Prague – Popular outrage strengthens Churchill – Polish (and Romanian) frontiers are guaranteed – ‘Managing’ the press – The Nazi–Soviet Pact – Invasion of Poland – Waverers (and turncoats) – Declaration of war

BOOK TWO
WAR AND COALITION

- THIRTEEN    The Phoney War    151
A slow start – The RAF learns hard lessons – Chamberlain's objective – is shared by the Dominions – Brief reappearance of 'the Walrus' – The industrial balance sheet – Contrast between Chamberlain and Churchill – The dismissal of Hore-Belisha – 'Raising the temperature' – Finland – The Norwegian expedition – Churchill catches the mood – and exploits it
- FOURTEEN    The Coalition Government is Formed    171
Excitement at Westminster – Margesson attempts the impossible – Halifax calculates – Collapse of the Western Front – Desperate measures – The 'Joint Citizenship' offer – The Royal Air Force lifts the threat
- FIFTEEN    Wasted Opportunities    185
The illusion of stalemate – Uncertain relations with de Gaulle – The seeds of mutual distrust over the long term – Mers-el-Kebir – The Dakar expedition – Rapprochement with Vichy? – Disappointments with FDR – The 'Destroyers for Bases' deal – The dollars run out – Neville Chamberlain sickens – The Eden–Halifax dilemma – The stifling of dissent – Menzies – The unheralded arrival of Hitler's deputy
- SIXTEEN    The Haemorrhage Continues    200
Strategic dilemmas – The Cabinet perplexed – The Hess mission – The Greek decision – Defeats accumulate – Hood and Crete – Implications for Empire – Germany invades Russia – Japan intent on conflict – Churchill's ambivalence – Repulse and Prince of Wales set sail for Singapore
- SEVENTEEN    The Loss of Empire    215
Collapse in Malaya – Naval losses – India smoulders – The Dominions 'decouple' – No recovery in the military situation – Scharnhorst in the English Channel – Bad omens on the home front
- EIGHTEEN    1942: Churchill's Difficult Summer    224
Claimants to the succession – their differing political affiliations – The 'Men of Action' – Potential contenders – The defeats accumulate – The fall of Tobruk – Machinations in the 1922 Committee – 'The party is a laughing stock' – Churchill's support from Labour on the wane – Weak position of the Conservative Party in the country – Military recovery – Doubts remain

NINETEEN    The Conservative Party and 'Welfare' 236
The party's ambivalence – 'Thatcherism' goes into hibernation – The Tory Reform Group makes the running – The Catering Wages Bill of 1943 – The genesis of Beveridge – The party is confused – Discussion in Cabinet – The orthodox view – Debate on the floor – Conservative stalling tactics – Labour indignation

TWENTY      1944: The Coalition in Decline 250
A discontented nation – The political climate alters – Labour and the electoral 'truce' – Churchill's personal standing, and weaknesses – With Beaverbrook at Marrakesh – The election battle-lines – An unexpected landslide

BOOK THREE

THE MANAGEMENT OF DECLINE

TWENTY-ONE    The Party in Defeat 263
The Conservative Party in shock – The grandees are dejected – The Young Turks take control of policy-making – The Industrial Charter – The Maxwell-Fyfe reforms

TWENTY-TWO    Friction at the Highest Levels 273
A relaxed high command – The question of succession – The certainty of Anthony Eden – Churchill is irritated – he humiliates his deputy – Others play an equivocal role – Beaverbrook's warning

TWENTY-THREE    The Rejection of Opportunity 279
The perceived importance of consensus – Rab Butler arrives at the Treasury – Sir Edward Bridges and his tales of woe – Butler thinks things through – ROBOT – Whitehall takes fright – Eden is nobbled – then Churchill – ROBOT dies

TWENTY-FOUR    The Eden Anachronism 289
Eden's personal failings – and rivals for the leadership – Beaverbrook warns against Macmillan – Resounding success at the general election – A reshuffle – Problems with the Suez Group – A State Department verdict

TWENTY-FIVE    Relegation 299
A very grand dinner at Number 10 – An unwelcome interruption – The strategic dilemma – The realities of power – The party is indignant – Macmillan at the Treasury – A failure to consult – The 'little coalition' – US vindictiveness – Anthony Eden becomes dispensable – Rab Butler awaits the call

- TWENTY-
SIX      Macmillan 309
Rab Butler at the despatch box – and then at the '22 – Macmillan as virtuoso – Eden returns – and fails his medical – The Cabinet's verdict – A fair wind – A bad press – Selwyn Lloyd has his card marked – Night of the Long Knives – Vassall and Profumo – Rambouillet and Skybolt – Macmillan is 'unassailable'
- TWENTY-
SEVEN      'A Sad Blow for Me' 321
The end-of-term speech – The grandees are unconvinced – A quiet autumn at Birch Grove – A tricky meeting with the Chairman – Preparations for the Party Conference – 'In the care of doctors' – A change of mind at Sister Agnes's
- TWENTY-
EIGHT      The Short Orthodox Premiership of Sir Alec Douglas-Home 330
Jockeying and resentment – Quentin Hogg is cross – Sir Alec is difficult – Powell and Macleod – Heath at the DTI – A general election – William Rees-Mogg pronounces – Rules to govern the election of a leader
- TWENTY-
NINE      Heath in Difficulties 338
Excellent prospects for the Prime Minister – The genesis of 'Selsdon Man' – Colleagues and protégés – Enoch Powell – The European vision – Interventionism multiplies – The Ulstermen are alienated – The TUC in the ascendant – The Oil Crisis – The miners are recalcitrant – The election
- THIRTY      1974 – The Year of Blunder 359
Heath's attempts to remain as Prime Minister – Thorpe goes missing – Heath's discussions with the Liberals – and the Ulstermen – Indiscipline and discontent in the Commons – A second general election approaches – A further change of tone – A bad campaign

BOOK FOUR

SHOCK THERAPY

- THIRTY-
ONE      The Varied Roles of Sir Edward du Cann 373
The Chairman of the 1922 Committee and his power – Ill-feeling towards Edward Heath – Willie Whitelaw does his best – A welcome invitation – The scene changes – Sir Keith Joseph falls by the wayside – The party machine sets out to thwart Margaret Thatcher
- THIRTY-
TWO      Mrs Thatcher's First Government 385
A leader on probation – A 'balanced' Cabinet – A resolute Chancellor – War in the South Atlantic – and at the colliery gates – Doubts at Buckingham Palace – Enemies and favourites – A touch of hubris – A full decade in power

- THIRTY-      The Year of Discontent    399
THREE      Exposure on two flanks – The breadth of discontent – An invitation from Lord Carrington – Margaret Thatcher's opinion of her colleagues – Differing interpretations of the 1922 rules – Autocracy is combined with negligence – Resignation of Sir Geoffrey Howe – Heseltine challenges – Weaknesses in the Prime Minister's position – her departure
- THIRTY-      The Beginning of the End    411
FOUR      A very short honeymoon – The Prime Minister travels to Bonn – Maastricht – A personal victory at the polls – The Maastricht time bomb detonates – Heseltine triggers sympathy for the miners – 'Sleaze', and the forfeiture of respect
- THIRTY-      A Trial of Leadership       421
FIVE      The Prime Minister is dejected – The likelihood of a challenge – and his decision to pre-empt – John Redwood declares – Shifting factions – The 'deal' with Michael Heseltine – The party remains uneasy
- THIRTY-      The Party Hits the Reef    432
SIX      A gloomy prognosis – Acrimony and depression – The Referendum Party – Postponing the election – A shapeless campaign – Landslide – 'Hats' into the ring – Michael Heseltine is afflicted – The end of the Tories
- Appendices    445
- Notes        462
- Bibliography  477
- Index        481