

B1

WAR PREVENTING

in the Nuclear Age

Dietrich Fischer

"Perhaps the most important book ever written about nuclear war." *

Contents and Figures

Tables and Figures	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	1
1 The Danger We Face	11
2 Approaches to the Prevention of War	22
3 The Dual Meaning of "Strength"	29
4 What Should a Nation Defend?	42
5 Defensive versus Offensive Arms	47
6 Dynamics of Arms Races	63
7 Preventing Nuclear War	72
8 Does Balance of Power Promote Security?	95
9 Transarmament before Disarmament	108
10 Nonmilitary Defense	112
11 Entangling Alliances	133
12 Forms of Power and Resistance: Military, Economic, and Psychological	142
13 General Defense	154
14 The Costs of Defense	164
15 Conflict Resolution	171
16 What We Can Do	187
Conclusions	208
Appendix: Some Simple Models of Arms Races	211
Bibliography	226
Index	231

Tables and Figures

Tables

2.1	A Classification of Possible Measures for the Prevention of War	25
3.1	Menger's Classification of Human Characters	31
3.2	A Classification of Nations	32
3.3	Pairs of Countries Which Are Compatible or Incompatible	36
3.4	Four Ways of Using Threats	39
4.1	Examples of Self-Compatible and Self-Incompatible National Goals	45
5.1	Main Characteristics and Some Typical Examples of Conventional Offensive and Defensive Weapons	53
7.1	Typical Hardware Characteristics of First-Strike and Second-Strike Nuclear Weapons Delivery Systems	85
8.1	Hypothetical Chances for a Disarming First Strike under Various Assumptions	97
10.1.	Four Categories of Methods to Dissuade Aggression	113
12.1	Forms of Power and of Resistance to Power	144
14.1	An International Comparison of Defense Expenditures	166
15.1	Four Negotiating Tactics	172
16.1	A Summary of Proposed Measures for the Prevention of War That Can Be Taken Independently by Nation-States	202
A.1	Four Possible Outcomes with Offensive Arms	221

x Tables and Figures

A.2	Four Possible Outcomes with Defensive Arms	222
A.3	Four Possible Outcomes with Defensive Arms on One Side and Offensive Arms on the Other	223
A.4	Payoff Matrix for a Prisoner's Dilemma Game	224

Figures

5.1	The Spectrum from Superoffensive to Superdefensive Arms	55
5.2	Positions Advocated by "Hawks" and "Doves," and by Promoters of War of Peace	56
5.3	The Effects of Unilateral and Bilateral Arms Increases or Reductions (with predominantly offensive arms)	58
8.1	The Obsolete Concept of "Balance of Power"	103
8.2	Defensive Capability and Offensive Capability of Two Hostile Countries, with Resulting Strategic Stability or Instability	105
A.1	Arms Expenditures in Response to Opponent's Production of a Given Amount of Offensive Arms	213
A.2	Optimal Schedule of Arms Expenditures in Response to Opponent's Production of a Variable Amount of Offensive Arms	213
A.3	Response to Opponent's Arms Expenditures in the Case of Defensive Arms	214
A.4	Optimal Responses to Arms Expenditures and for Various Degrees of Offensive and Defensive Arms	215
A.5	Equilibrium Points of Mutual Arms Expenditures	216