

B

MORE THAN THE GRAINS

*Participatory Management
in the Philippine Rice
Sufficiency Program 1967-1969*

An inspiring chronicle of participatory management in nation building—A Philippine Case Study

Rafael M. Salas

SIMUL PRESS

Contents

Foreword by Saburo Okita
Acknowledgments

Introduction 1

Phase I

Laying the Foundations..... 13

Defining Goals
The RCPCC Action Officer
The Operational Strategy: Participatory Management
Problems in the Rice Fields
Defining Priority Provinces and Setting Targets
Immediate Local Needs
Politics of Rice
Information Needs
Reaching out to Students and the Media
A Model Province—Tarlac
A Potential Roadblock: Marketing
High-Yielding Variety Seeds
Continuing Issues: Distribution, Fertilizers and Loans

Achievements
Winning Support from Students and Youth Groups
Success Raises New Issues
The Media and the Government

Phase II

Self-Sufficiency 103

Smooth Transition to NFAC
A Critical Long-term Issue: Land Reform
Do We Need to Import Rice?
Broadening Participation
The Rapid Spread of High-Yielding Varieties
Input from AID *
New Targets: Fish, Livestock and Vegetables
Do We Have Enough to Export?
Talks with the Masaka
Production Goals Reached
Second Generation of HYVs
Reforestation
Uncertain Projections
Rice for Export?
FACOMAS
An Enduring Question: Corruption
The Broader Concept: Population

Phase III

Towards the Future 157

A Response to Marketing Needs: Cooperatives
Measures for Flood Damage
Recognition from the United Nations
NFAC Takes Over
Fish for the Market

Rain and Planes
Looking Back

Afterword 187

Appendix 1

The Philippine Rice Program—
Lessons for Agricultural Development

Randolph Barker 193

Appendix 2

The Philippines—Towards the Year 2000 212

Philippine Participants in the RCPCC

Rice Sufficiency Program 224

Acronyms 234

Index 237

About the Author 243