

BERT KEIZER

DANCING WITH MISTER D

Notes on life and death

Contents

Preface • The trade • What flesh can do unto me • Descartes' glandula pinealis • We are dust • Unwanted funeral guests • Death arranged • Thanatophilia • A candle near the abyss • Shoes in the fridge • Exam failed • Kroet's disease • Cynics, believers, scientists • Ein furchtbarer Held (A frightful hero) • Aryuna and the lake • A habit in the family • God's address • Biblical Calendar • Soul damage • No Christmas without God? • Dead is dead • Breakfast à la Chamfort • Finding the Styx • The libido is a quadruped • Mad nephew • Intimations of reincarnation • Nagging • A tree certificate • Catch 22, the euthanasia variety • Nobel prize in the offing • The war that was • Arie takes a funeral
• The old questions, the old answers • Godly and worldly knowledge • A double name as placebo • Proust's madeleine, filthy version • Beckett closed to quadrupeds • Fair trial, then hang 'em • Death is not etc. • Is Death not . . . ? • Merciless logic for a futile purpose • Love ends, time and again • Withered flowerchild • Tough rabbit • Rite as displacement • Solo flight in the domain of Death • The things he saw in Heaven • Sounding brass • Astrology and all that • Fake heat, real burn • The complex macaroni in our heads • Keats' death warrant • Modest silhouettology • Gang of cynics • Not born for this • An anti-despairant • All

DANCING WITH MISTER D

mushrooms can be eaten • The concert of Life • Living forward, thinking backwards • Hope and biochemistry • Preventing is dull, healing is fun • Parents and children • Empty hands • Phantom pain • Phoebe discovers mortality • Catastrophilia • Cancer research and rain-making • Alexander's divinity • Letters to Donald • Anatomy of everyday life • 'Why me?' • Tibetan death exercises • Death, the factory • Dying alone