MOST of the research on which this book is based was done for my Ph.D. thesis, submitted to the University of Malaya in 1985. The award of a Fellowship from the Universiti Sains Malaysia, from 1979 to 1983, enabled me to undertake research towards the Ph.D. During that time, I also received a grant of RM3,000 from the Lee Foundation. Nine months of sabbatical leave granted by the Universiti Sains Malaysia in 1995 gave me the time needed to revise the thesis while a British High Commissioner's Chevening Award sustained me during four fruitful months in the United Kingdom from March to June 1995. During these four months, I enjoyed the hospitality extended to me as a Member of the Senior Common Room of St Hilda's College in Oxford. The contributions of these institutions, in different ways, to this work is gratefully acknowledged.

Like all researchers, I was assisted by the staff of several libraries and would like to record here my gratitude to the staff of the National Archives in Kuala Lumpur, the libraries of the Universiti Sains Malaysia, the University of Malaya, the National University of Singapore, the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies in Singapore, the Public Record Office in Kew, and the Rhodes House Library in Oxford. Special thanks are due to the United Chinese School Committees' Association and United Chinese School Teachers' Association for allowing me free access to their files; to Mr Too Joon Hing, Professor Gwee Yee Hean, and the late Mr Chou Man Sha, all of whom generously made available to me their collections of files, newspaper cuttings, and books. Regrettably, many of the persons who granted me interviews when I was researching my Ph.D. have since died, but the contribution of each and every one of them was invaluable in helping me to understand better the events recounted in this book.

As a Ph.D. student, I enjoyed the guidance of two sympathetic and supportive supervisors in Professor Lee Kam Hing and Dr Stephen Leong. As a novice in historical research, I was assisted by Paul Kratoska, Lim Teck Ghee, and Yuen Choy Leng, former colleagues at the Universiti Sains Malaysia. Long discussions with Loh Kok Wah and Khoo Khay Jin helped sharpen my grasp of many historical and political issues. Special thanks are due to Cheah Boon Kheng and Khoo Boo Teik whose friendly but sharp criticisms and probing questions spurred me to continue rethinking, revising, and rewriting until the very last moment. Finally, without Yew Fai, I could not have stayed sane and human through the mad process of researching and writing.
