PREFACE

This book contains my thirty-two poems composed after very prolonged and digestive thoughts since the May 13th tragedy. They have been written with a deep sense of urgency, and consciousness that society has not been moving in the right direction.

The poems are intended for every sensible reader who can give serious thought to the messages contained therein, which in turn, it is hoped that a refined and responsible individual would emerge.

It is also hoped that the collective, overall result would be the moulding of a new positive thinking and attitude of society itself, hence the birth of a better society more conscious of its blessings and obligations, and truly conducive to a rich, fruitful living.
