Vision of comfort and quick access

MALAYSIA's first aerial tour operator, Vision Air (M) Sdn Bhd, began operation in January 2001.

On its first anniversary this year, Prime Minister Datuk Seri Dr Mahathir Mohamad said, "It is hoped that Malaysian companies like Vision Air will spearhead the progress and success of our country in the aviation industry. I am especially pleased that from concept to current day management, Vision Air is wholly a Malaysian entity."

The airline began by providing charter services within Sarawak to serve the local community, particularly those in the rural areas. It later expanded to include scheduled flights - using Miri as its base - to Mulu, Kuching, Bario, Mukah, Tanjung Manis and other rural destinations.

In addition, the airline also has scheduled flights connecting Mulu with Kota Kinabalu. In the pipeline is the linking of World Heritage Mulu National Park to Brunei's capital Bandar Seri Begawan.

Vision Air's existing aerial tours take travellers to the World Heritage sites of Mount Kinabalu and the pinnacles and limestone mountains of Mulu. Never before have travellers been able to enjoy such spectacular vistas of Malaysia's natural wonders in these areas.

Bearing in mind its social responsibility to the local communities and commitment to the tourism industry, Vision Air gives maximum value in all its services, making each destination accessible to the most number of people.

As a Malaysian company, Vision Air tries to provide warm hospitality and personalised service that the country is famous for. It also creates a relaxed and cheerful atmosphere while giving uncompromising commitment to the highest standards of professionalism and technological excellence. Vision Air maintains a single marque of aircraft, namely the highly reputed Fairchild-Dornier machines. Starting with two D-228 19-seater planes, Vision Air expanded to its present fleet of five aircraft, including two 328JETs which can seat 32 passengers in air-conditioned comfort.

With a steady rise in popularity of its services, Vision Air believes the future would see progressive growth.

Vision Air is also planning to increase its network of routes in keeping with the needs and responses of the community it serves.
