How long do they want to cling on?

Maya

DATUK Seri Dr Mahathir Mohamad's statement that long-serving leaders should give way to new faces is well-timed.

However, some component party leaders who had once pledged to be there no longer than Dr Mahathir, are now trying to hide behind the veil of party membership.

It is not statesman-like to defend their position by saying that they will remain as long as the party members want them.

We are all aware how the party system works.

How long do they want to cling on to their seats using this lame excuse? They should take the cue from Dr Mahathir.
