Investor-friendly education programmes

PNB's strategic long-term investment education programmes support the Government's goal of creating an investment-oriented k-economy community.

At the grassroots level, the education programme instils a life-long interest in mathematics and investment.

For the industry, PNB set up the PNB Investment Institute, a joint venture with the Securities Institute of Education, Australia, to develop and train professionals in the field of finance and investment.

PNB also established the Tun Ismail Mohamed Ali Foundation to endow professorial chairs at universities in Malaysia to support research in economics, finance and law.

The Foundation, named after PNB's first chairman Tun Ismail, is a recognition of his outstanding contributions to the people and the nation.

It also sponsors students with outstanding academic achievement to attend well-reputed universities abroad to pursue studies in economics, finance and law.

Minggu Saham Amanah Malaysia launched on April 20, 2000, by Prime Minister Datuk Seri Dr Mahathir Mohamad is believed to be the only one of its kind in the world.

The annual national event held every April 20, gains the support from key industrial players and draws active participation from all Malaysians.

This event inculcates the smart investment culture and the importance of financial planning through various creative and structured activities based on integrated education and full participation of people from all ages and walks of life.
