

peoples and countries is no further than the distance which separates you and me at this table.

5. The peoples of our countries are peace-loving. We need development to raise their living standard and quality of life. There can be no economic growth without internal stability and security. Our enemies know this and thus we face a common threat along our border and in our countries. We are just as determined to survive and defend our freedoms and ways of life as they are