

elements more bold and treat the rule of law with utter contempt. They hide behind the law to perpetrate their evil deeds. I agree that normally, they should be charged and tried. But it is easier said than done. Peace and security are of paramount importance to us. Subject to reasonable safeguards, these people should be separated and detained. The framers of the constitution have foreseen this problem, and have made provisions for it under Article 149. The Internal Security Act, 1960, is made under that Article.
