ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

WITHOUT the help of a large number of people and organizations, I would have found it impossible to complete this book. The original Ph.D. dissertation was written under the guidance of Professor O. W. Wolters, of Cornell University, and I will always be grateful for his encouragement, suggestions, and criticisms. Professors Benedict Anderson and James Siegel also gave advice in the final stages and to them, as well as to the many friends with whom I discussed my work, I would like to express my thanks. Above all, I wish to acknowledge the assistance I received from my husband and colleague, Leonard Y. Andaya, whose searching comments on successive drafts not only clarified my thinking but helped to make the writing of this study both enjoyable and exciting.

The research, carried out in The Netherlands, England, Malaysia, and Indonesia, was financed by the London-Cornell Program with some assistance from the Cornell Southeast Asia Program. I am particularly indebted to the following institutions, which made available to me library and archival holdings, and to the assistance of their staffs: the Wason Collection, Olin Library, Cornell University; the Algemeen Rijksarchief in The Hague (especially Professor Dr. M. A. P. Meilink-Roelofs, Dr. M. E. van Opstall, and Mrs. Miriam Verkuijl-van den Berg); the Koninklijk Instituut voor Taal-, Land- en Volkenkunde in Leiden; Leiden University Library; the library of the School of Oriental and African Studies, London; the India Office, London; the British Museum; the Royal Asiatic Society, London; the Royal Commonwealth Society, London; the Arkib Negara, Kuala Lumpur; the Muzium Negara, Kuala Lumpur; the Dewan Bahasa dan Pustaka, Kuala Lumpur; the University of Malaya Library, Kuala Lumpur; Singapore University Library; the National Library, Singapore; the Arsip Nasional, Jakarta; the library of the Australian National University, Canberra. I should also like to thank the Modern Indonesia Project of Cornell University and the Department of Pacific and Southeast Asian History at the Australian National University for the provision of office space while writing and revising.
