YOURSAY 'Members in the house who suddenly become big headed must be nipped in the bud and flushed out before they turn the house into a circus.'

PAS declares 'war' against troublesome duo your saySaneesvara: Former Selangor PAS commissioner Hasan Ali and former deputy president Nasharudin Mat Isa's rebellion and treason is calculated to have maximum impact for the benefit of their paymasters.

Good riddance to bad rubbish if this is so. PAS will survive this. I congratulate PAS for having the strength and courage to out such traitors from their midst.

Hermit: By all means, do not invite troublemakers into your house. Members in the house who suddenly become big headed must be nipped in the bud and flushed out before they turn the house into a circus.

These paid clowns rock the house until members and supporters become frenzied and forget that noises too are coming from opposing houses. That is the cardinal rule which would keep troublemakers at bay.

These blokes pretending to be saviours of Muslim unity are truly Trojan horses with the ultimate aim of disintegrating PAS.

If they are not flushed out soonest, they'll be like magnets easily attracting others to rock and sink the boat. PAS has gained acceptance among the largely well-informed Malaysians, irrespective of race and religion.

It must be put on record that not an iota of contribution has ever come from these two blokes for what PAS is today. Act fast against them before it is too late.

Trumpet Call: Hasan and Nasharudin have the guts to challenge the rest of the leadership of PAS. It is testing time for the party.

Either the party is strong and be resolute or it is weak and gives in to these two goons. PAS' mettle is now being put to the test to see what kind of steel the party is made of. Malaysians of all races are watching.

A Voice From Aussieland: PAS should count its blessings having caught these two potential frogs in time; wreckers of PAS' vision and policies should be sent to the abattoir. Send them a show-cause letter, and less said, the better.

Go4it: The PAS disciplinary committee should give a show-cause letter to these two 'rebels' and another one to the Youth chief, Nasrudin Hassan, for going against party principles.

These are the ones who will bring disunity to PAS. Strike while the iron is hot.

2cts Worth: It is obvious whatever action, PAS has to take soon before real damage is inflicted on the very eve of the next GE.

You are killing two maggots with one stone. You remove the scum and at the same time reduce their market value. They will be turned into useless junk.

Bluemountains: PAS is giving the duo a slow death.

I'll remain loyal to PAS struggle, says Hasan

Hmmmmmm: Hasan Ali, since you declare that you are still loyal to PAS, it should not be a problem if PAS drops you from the next GE and you vow to fully support the PAS candidate who replaces you. Then we believe you.

Tenth: Hasan, you have passed the expiry date. The disposal bin is waiting for you. Anywhere you are going to contest, the rakyat will shun you, regardless of your party. You are a racist and a hypocrite.

Docs: If I am reading Hasan Ali well, it seems he is grovelling at Umno's feet. His actions appear to be always in conflict with PAS' agenda, and in most cases he has been most disruptive of the Pakatan Selangor government policies.

His style of politics is a hallmark of an Umno agent. Instead of trying to kiss and make up with PAS, why doesn't Hasan stand under a BN ticket in GE13? I'm sure Umno will want to take care of one of their most loyal and prized stooges.

Trumpet Call: This guy is really dangerous. First, he is an ultra-Malay who only champions Malay rights. Second, he is operating on a delusion that he is called by Allah to do that.

Thirdly, he has no qualms instigating the sentiments of the Malays against the other races and religions just to justify his so-called calling from on high.

Lastly, he is prepared to achieve his diabolical ends at all costs.

Onyourtoes: Please Hasan, there is no need for you to call for a press conference.

You courted the controversies, created ambiguities and thrived on confusion. You just want to create as much havoc as possible before you go.
