YOURSAY 'If he cannot prove his accusations and then he has to stop making these claims or else face severe action.'

Hasan: 'Baptised' Muslims told me of missionary tactics your sayMalaysian Born: It is very likely that whoever had made these claims is lying, probably to get into the good graces of the religious thugs who were probably threatening him under the guise of re-education.

If Hasan Ali cannot prove his accusations - and they are based purely on unsubstantiated hearsay - then he should be given notice that he has to cease and desist from making these claims or severe action will be taken against him.

This nonsense has been allowed to go on for too long. Frankly, I am sick of hearing about it as it's an insult to our intelligence.

The claim that one actually needs to go to a mosque to get friendly with Muslims is, I guess, in keeping with Hasan's non-existent intellect.

I can't wait for the next election so that he can be given the job he deserves - sitting outside the toilet collecting tokens.

Louis: This liar will not rest until troubles start among the races. Bring those Muslims who are converted and at the same time go after the church where the conversion took place.

Please charge and jail those culprits. I am a Christian and I want those pastors or priests jail if it is true.

Hasan, please do not tell cock-and-bull stories without evidence. You and I are God fearing, but you do not behave like one.

Bert: I am disgusted to hear over and over the same old tale of "missionaries dressed in white robes prayed in mosques" to get close to Muslims to convert them.

If you are a man of God - you claim to be one - and if you have any principles, disclose who these so-called missionaries dressed in white robes.

We are fed up with your divide and rule and scare tactics. Be man enough!

Changeagent: Hasan Ali is playing the imaginary Christian bogey card again. Is dressing in white robes and praying in mosques the only way to get close to Muslims? Wouldn't it be much easier to just dress in normal casual clothes and befriend them outside the mosque instead?

His allegations are preposterous to say the least, and really defy good reasoning or common sense. They carry no weight at all and should be roundly condemned by all right-thinking Muslims and non-Muslims alike.

Anonymous: Hasan Ali, slandering others is not the way of a Muslim.

If some Muslims have deviated, you have to design programmes and methods to prevent others from doing so.

The 'murtad' (apostate) ones are not your responsibility. Allah will deal with them accordingly.

Up2U: The police must take a serious view of Hasan Ali's claims. If it is true, firm action must be taken against the Christian missionaries and the 51 individuals must come forward.

If it is a false claim, then action must be taken against Hasan Ali for attempting to incite hatred and racial religious tensions. This is serious and if the police do not take action, then something is very, very wrong.

Clever Voter: This man is neither stupid nor ignorant. He knows what he is doing. He will continue with blessings from his BN friends - to disrupt and instigate within and outside his own community.

All his allegations are to many not true, but there will be a few believers. History will remind us that there will be always be such characters. Thankfully this is a passing fad.

But there will always new ones emerging from nowhere. We just have to put up with his nonsense, and hopefully the majority feel the same way.

Kairos: Say what you want Hasan, nobody believes in you. All that you conjure up is purely made up unless and until you can come up with names and proof that what you say holds any water.

It is bullshit to say that you cannot disclose further because you fear for their safety. Safety from what? Who are they in danger from?

What you allege is so ridiculous. How could so many Christian missionaries infiltrate into a mosque and get so close to the ummah? And wearing white robes as well.

What happened to these 'missionaries' when they were discovered. Why didn't the mosque authorities report them to the police?

Anak JB: I am ROTFLMAO! This guy is a comedian of some sort. Drinking holy water? His understanding of Christianity (or lack of it) is probably through watching Hollywood movies.

He is ignorant and can't rest until he brings conflicts between the various religions. He is as ignorant as Perkasa in understanding other cultures and religions and a product of BTN (Biro Tatanegara) preaching hatred and unfounded conspiracies to instill insecurity amongst Muslims and Malays so that they can continue to command power.

Ann: Consumed holy water? Even my toes are laughing.

Joker: Hasan Ali, how would you feel if I accuse you or your loved ones of doing something illegal or shameful?

What if I announce to the world saying that Hasan Ali takes a night cap every night and frequents brothels whenever he goes outstation? What if I say that your wife is two-timing you and can be frequently seen shopping at luxurious boutiques?

However, I can't name my sources for the sake of their safety since they also told me that you are connected to illegal societies and travels with thugs as bodyguards.

Mat Malaysia: Sorry Hasan, I still don't get it. What's the problem here? What is wrong with someone using their God-given mind to make a decision? Am I missing something here?
