PKR questions minister's 'RM1.5mil payout' to actress

your sayKairos: Not only are members of the present ruling coalition corrupt, they are immoral as well. That's what happens when a particular party has been given the reigns of power for too long a time.

When a minister is driven by his lust, unfaithful to his family and make himself vulnerable to blackmail, how can he do his job well?

That's why our federal ministries are so poorly run. The present government is rotten to the core. Everybody in the towns and cities know this.

Only the poor interior folks are oblivious of the extent of the corruption and immorality in the rank and file of the government. The rakyat must do their best to let the whole nation know and boot the rotten crooks out.

Sadirah: The minister of women's affairs is a divorcee who married another, and so is his wife.

The defence minister is alleged to have beaten up a man who is supposed to have had an affair with his daughter. The minister in charge of parliament, famous for taxi permits, is now trying to protect his son who has a passion for cigars, women and fast cars.

The finance minister II is having to protect himself because his aide has been caught with a lot of money. The deputy finance minister is hiding money received from a Johor Bahru businessman in his personal account for social use.

Now we have an Umno vice-president's alleged affairs financed by money needed for infrastructure in Sabah. We have the religious affairs minister who used zakat money to finance his legal costs.

And with the foreign minister and his alleged kickbacks via HongKong, what can we say about the integrity of the team led by Najib?

Anon-23: There is a heavenly body referred to by astronomers as the 'black hole'. Methinks this minister is caught in the gravitational pull of a 'black hole' and there is no escape for him.

The 'black hole' swallows up anything in its proximity including light (and ill-gotten Malaysian ringgit as well). Good luck to this stricken minister not that I really care one damn bit for him.

Headhunter: As we said before, our politicians' greatest downfall is all due to either sex and money. Or both. This case is another who got entangled in a honey trap, using our money as usual. This must be a lucky year for Pakatan.

Changeagent: RM1.5 million sounds about right. Botox injections and plastic surgeries do cost quite a bit these days.

Odev: There is a big battle in Sabah Umno. Several days ago, whistleblowers revealed that the two Aman brothers were linked to illicit funds from logging.

Now the case of illicit sex and RM1.5 million paid to an ageing actress by an Umno vice-president, who has been linked to Jibby's (Najib Razak's) plan to oust the two Aman brothers.

Poor Jibby, he is a general fighting without soldiers. Jibby can't even win the battles. Just forget about winning the war.

Flamescanner: I'm starting to admire the capabilities of our dear leaders - the ability to have so many of them with the same characteristics and traits, is simply awesome. They surely know how to spot talent when they see one.

I would like to recruit the talent scout. That way, I can give him my requirements and he should be able to get me the people with the right credentials, whatever those credentials might be.

But I'm pretty certain though that I can't afford his fees.

Changeagent: The fight is coming to an end. Of course, this is the kind of gutter politics that Umno wants PKR to indulge in.

After all, they started the game, didn't they? Who can forget about the farcical sodomy 1, sodomy 2 or Datuk T video?

Tpn: Why no video was taken by the famous 'blue film producers' Datuk Trio?

Not Confused: More abuse of the rakyat's hardearned taxes. I'm sure the money wasn't from legal, gainful employment.

Once again, it show how hypocritical BN is - with the Datuk Ts publishing a sex video and claiming foul. It's time BN cleaned up its own house before throwing stones at others.

Bender: This minister should follow the footstep of Kinabatangan MP Bung Mokhtar Radin.

When Bung wants fresh meat, he went shopping and bought some, and he ended up with quite a tasty piece last time he did that.

He has been savouring the piece relatively peacefully all these years (and I have to admit I envy him whenever I come to think about it.).

This mysterious 'menteri', on the other hand is so stupid, paying such a premium to bag the actress in all secrecy.

I hope the meat is of wagyu-quality as well, otherwise it's money wasted. And now, everyone wants to know... pressure.. pressure.. my dear minister.
