Federal Territories MCA division's karaoke campaign video, arguably the most memorable campaign material during the 13th general election, has made it on Australian prime time TV.

Last Wednesday on "Gruen Nation", a humorous current affairs talk show on state-owned ABC, panelists examined Australia's past and current political advertisements and aired the karaoke clip while discussing about singing politicians.

The clip in question featured MCA's candidates singing John Paul Young's 'Love is in the Air', which host Will Anderson described as the "worst political karaoke video of 2013".

MCA members in the clip include Bukit Bintang candidate Frankie Gan Joo Zin, MCA Federal Territories 1Malaysia team leader Banie Chin Yen Foo, Bandar Tun Razak candidate Tan Kok Eng and Cheras candidate Steven Teoh Chee Hooi.

The live audience cracked up at the video, to which Anderson then declares, "Forget Australia's got talent I want to see Malaysia's got talent now."

"MCA went on to halve its seats in the Malaysian parliament," he added. "And John Paul Young is turning in his grave, and he was not even dead until he heard that."
