YOURSAY 'His strong opposition to Azizah's appointment speaks louder...'

Hadi says no to unity gov't with Umno

Pemerhati: After creating so much havoc in Selangor and acting like a good Umno lackey in strongly opposing the appointment of PKR president Wan Azizah Wan Ismail as the Selangor MB, even though she has the majority support, PAS president Abdul Hadi Awang now says he will not form a unity government with Umno.

But his actions and his very unreasonable strong opposition to Wan Azizah's appointment speaks much louder than his current words of not uniting with Umno.

Hadi's actions have clearly revealed that if he continues to stay in Pakatan Rakyat, he will be an Umno Trojan horse and a great liability to Pakatan.

Mushiro: This is another trick by Hadi to avoid a no-confidence vote against him at the PAS muktamar in Johor. The only cause of the current MB fiasco and its further prolongation is Hadi and PAS.

Had PAS fully backed Wan Azizah, the problem would not be there. And how did Hadi solve this MB issue - by insisting to submit three names and saying that Wan Azizah is incompetent?

ConstitutionIsSupreme: Fantastic, a Pakatan component party leader Hadi Awang who had betrayed Pakatan right and left and secretly met with the Selangor sultan without the knowledge of DAP and PKR leaders, now has the guts to demand DAP and PKR not to betray Pakatan? I am speechless.

I feel that Hadi would at least show some sincerity if he apologises at the muktamar that he had unintentionally caused the problem in Selangor and he is committed to work within Pakatan.

What Hadi said is in my opinion akin to killing somebody and then demanding the deceased's next-of-kin not to charge him in court. If this is the mentality that Hadi has, then what future is there for PAS to be a partner in Pakatan and the road to Putrajaya?

Anonymous #55961902: Thus far, we have never heard of PKR or DAP betraying PAS. But in the Selangor MB crisis, PAS has outwardly betrayed PKR and DAP by submitting its own candidates for the MB's post.

To make matters worse, Hadi had run down Wan Azizah, claiming she is not qualified to be the MB. Whether Wan Azizah is capable is not an issue, but she is a doctor by profession and the president of PKR.

From her credentials, she is more qualified than many others, including PAS candidates. Hadi should have shown some respect to her. In addition, he had pledged his support for present MB Abdul Khalid Ibrahim, who was sacked from PKR.

So who is the traitor? Hadi Awang should use his common sense to go along with Pakatan's stand rather than trying to show his power to challenge his 'tahaluf' (partners in cooperation).

Hadi should have stood by his other 'tahaluf' in nominating Wan Azizah and letting the crisis settle and wait till the next GE before trying to claim Selangor for PAS.

Terjah: Indeed, the current crisis in Selangor with regards to the MB's post could have been settled had PAS supported Wan Azizah for the post in a united stand with PKR and DAP.

The problem is PAS is playing two sides. Hadi, you are the one who betrayed Pakatan, not the other way around. With your flip-flop decisions, you even betrayed your own colleagues in the party's central working committee (CWC) that decided to support Wan Azizah as MB.

You ignored the majority voice of your own CWC members. PAS should ask him to leave and retire if PAS wants to move forward and obtain support from non-Muslims. But the way it is going, even the Muslims are beginning to be doubtful about PAS.

Master Sun: In front, he says no to a unity government with Umno, but behind he is doing damage to PKR and DAP.

Avatar1: Another sandiwara for Pengkalan Kubor by-election campaign. You back stab your partners in Pakatan and you are now saying the opposite. A hypocrite of the first order.

Anonymous_1396929433: Hadi, this unity government notion and the MB imbroglio was started by that PAS think-tank chief Mohd Zuhdi Marzuki. It was not denied that you did consider this option.

When you discovered your favourite boy (PKR deputy leader Azmin Ali) in Pakatan was not playing ball with you, you went berserk. Hadi, you are a PAS leader, you know Khalid Ibrahim is now an Independent, yet you and your ulama colleagues still wants him to be MB.

You even have the cheek to tell us in Selangor that you will prop up his weaknesses. You mean you have that much influence over Khalid?

Soo Jin Hou: I used my own money to fly back from Hong Kong to vote for a PAS candidate.
After this betrayal, you are on your own, PAS.

Once bitten twice shy, fool me once, shame on you, fool me twice, shame on me.
