Prime Minister Anwar Ibrahim said the Madani government is determined to continue to elevate the dignity of workers in this country to a much better level, regardless of racial background, skin colour or religious beliefs.

“I and the government are committed to defending the fate of all workers, even though the majority are Malays, the fate of anak-anak (children) Chinese, Indian, Dayak and Kadazan-Dusun cannot be marginalised.

“Don’t just be nice to the higher-ups, but to all workers of all levels right to the lowest ranks,” he said.

Anwar also reminded the workers not to allow the elements of division stemming from racial differences and political beliefs to continue to haunt this country, thus hindering productivity and services.

“Every day we read news about racial disputes, this will not take us anywhere.

“On the contrary, understanding, unity and the spirit of togetherness between people of various races are the keys to taking the country towards greater progress,” he added.

The prime minister said this in a special message at the 2025 National Labour Day celebration at the Axiata Arena, Bukit Jalil today.

Workers drive progress

In his speech, Anwar stressed that workers are the main catalyst in creating a great and competitive nation.

He said that every individual who works - whether in factories, government departments, clinics, schools, police stations or any sector - plays an important role in driving change and achieving national success.

"This country still faces various challenges. Our days are faced with major issues such as the crisis in Palestine and global uncertainties, including the arbitrary actions of great powers such as the United States.

"However, we can still progress if everyone works diligently, sincerely and with full commitment.

"No matter which sector, workers who hold on to the values of sincerity and faith in the country will definitely contribute to the formation of a great nation," the premier added.
