PKR de-facto leader Anwar Ibrahim is keeping everyone guessing over whether or not he will contest the party presidency during the party polls in November.

At a press conference today, Anwar downplayed the matter, stating that he was unaware if he would be nominated at all for the post.

"I have not thought about it, and none of my colleagues at PKR have told me, 'Anwar, you have to contest'. It is only outsiders that keep asking," he said.

The post is currently held by his wife Dr Wan Azizah Wan Ismail, whom Anwar jokingly said is getting more support than him.

"Azizah has more support than me anyway... She is doing a good job so why should I disturb her?" he said, smiling.
