Najib Razak said that as his work takes him around the country, he would like to connect and meet personally with as many of his online friends, near where they live.

The prime minister said that he looked forward to many more meaningful interactions with all of them, whether online or in person.

"If you would like to meet with me during my travels to your area, submit your details in the form here (in the 1Malaysia blog)."

"Beginning next year, when I am confirmed to visit your state or district, my office will contact you with more information on our exclusive meet up," he said in his 1Malaysia blog.

Najib said that while he was on sick leave recently, he had some time to reflect on the growing number of his online friends, particularly on Facebook, and the interactions he had with all of them.

The prime minister said that he had met hundreds of them who had travelled from all over the country to meet him at the 1Malaysia Tea event last March.

However, he said this number remained a fraction of the 500,000 or so Malaysians scattered across the country who had connected with him online.

"While the tea and dinner events allow me to connect with some of you directly, I appreciate that travelling to Putrajaya can be challenging due to various considerations.

"Still, I would like to ensure that everyone has an opportunity to meet with me," he said.
