PETALING JAYA – Lawyer Gobind Singh said he is considering getting a handwriting expert to analyse the writing in a purported suicide note written by Teoh Beng Hock.

He said the option was one of the various possibilities being studied, following the Attorney-General's Chambers implying in a statement Monday that the "suicide note," which was first found inside Teoh's sling bag more than two months after his death in July last year, was only recently considered as possible evidence.

On other possible courses of action, Gobind, who is the counsel for Teoh's family in the inquest into the death of the political aide, declined comment.

"I don't want to comment yet because I don't want to compromise my position," he told The Star on Tuesday.
