SHAH ALAM - Youth of all races can work together in many issues especially in promoting nation building through national unity in Malaysia, said Minister in the Prime Minister's Department Dr Koh Tsu Koon.

He said as such, Intercultural youth programmes could provide the understanding to the younger generation about why it is important that they become team players to achieve the nation's objectives of unity and growth.

"These programmes will give them the opportunity to express themselves and talk about what they can do for other people. As the Prime Minister highlighted in the 1Malaysia concept, we must accept that we are different but we are also the same because we are human and we share the same blood.

"There are so many things we can fight together for the benefit of ourselves and others," he said when opening the Intercultural Youth Leadership Workshop here Saturday.

Koh said unity among Malaysians could be strengthened if the younger generation could communicate with each other, know each other and help one another.

The three-day-program is jointly organised by The Friendship Group for Inter-religious Service (FGIS) and National Unity and Integration Department. - Bernama
