PETALING JAYA -- It is the prerogative of Prime Minister Najib Tun Razak to decide when to call for the general election, Minister in the Prime Minister's Department Dr Koh Tsu Koon said.

He said Malaysia's parliament system followed the Westminster system in England, a democratic parliamentary system. Therefore, the decision must be made by the prime minister.

"Anything is possible, it can be this year, next year or the following year, but it will definitely be less than two years from now," he told reporters after meeting Junior Chamber International (JCI) president Kentaro Harada and JCI Malaysia members here yesterday.

Koh, who is Gerakan president, said the party might nominate various new guards as candidate but most importantly, they should serve the people at all times.

On the 1Malaysia concept, he said it had become increasingly popular and widely accepted by the people, including in Sabah and Sarawak, adding that the opposition too, was free to adopt and embrace the concept.
