The leaders of DAP are really hypocrites as on one hand, you hear Lim Kit Siang saying he feels 'heartbroken' over Tunku Abdul Aziz quitting the party while on the other hand, Tan Kok Wai rains criticism on him, tarnishing his name.

In order to keep Tunku Abdul Aziz, Lim Guan Eng's side has persuaded him to stay and offered a stipend of RM 50,000 to go with it. Isn't it a clear attempt by DAP to bribe Tunku Abdul Aziz? Isn't this a disgraceful and outrageous insult to the founder of the Malaysian chapter of Transparency International (TI-M)?

Tunku Aziz's decision to leave the party has revealed that all is not good as it seems in DAP. It is obvious that there exists discord and feuds within the party, but the leaders are not allowed to speak of it.

Lim Guan Eng's and Tan Kok Wai's reactions towards his resignation contradict each other respectively. Lim Guan Eng did not bother about the reasons behind his withdrawal. However, he sought to persuade him to stay afterwards to save his father, Lim Kit Siang's name. Tan Kok Wai on the other hand, refuses the return of Tunku Abdul Aziz in order to prevent further dissenting voices from occurring within the party.

No matter how pretentiously DAP tries to act sincere in keeping Tunku Aziz to stay with them, this series of events have proven that DAP will not tolerate any dissidents within the party. Their authoritarian style of leadership suppresses and puts to end any leaders with differing opinions. All will be punished in DAP for not toeing the leaders' line.
