SHANGHAI: Datuk Seri Abdullah Ahmad Badawi has given a ray of hope to the 128 top scorers who failed to get places to study medicine at public universities, with a broad hint that he has found a solution to their plight.

He plans to reveal his solution after the Cabinet meeting tomorrow.

"I think we should support them and not deprive our brilliant children the opportunity to continue their education. That is very important.

"I have some ideas but I'm not ready to announce them yet," the Prime Minister told reporters here before leaving for home after a five-day visit to China yesterday.

"Let me discuss it. I'll make the announcement after the Cabinet meeting," he said when commenting on the 128 top scoring students in the STPM and matriculation examinations who had reportedly been denied places at the public universities that offered medical programmes.

They had all obtained the maximum cumulative grade point average of 4.0 to qualify for the places.

Of the 779 students selected to study medicine, 439 were Bumiputeras, 297 Chinese and 43 Indians.
