KUALA LUMPUR: About 600 Malaysia Airlines staff members based at its 34-storey headquarters in the Golden Triangle will relocate to offices in Subang and KL International Airport as part of MAS's turnaround plan.

Taking the lead will be MAS chairman Datuk Dr Munir Majid and managing director Idris Jala; this month, they will move to the airline's former headquarters in Subang, near Terminal Three of the old international airport.

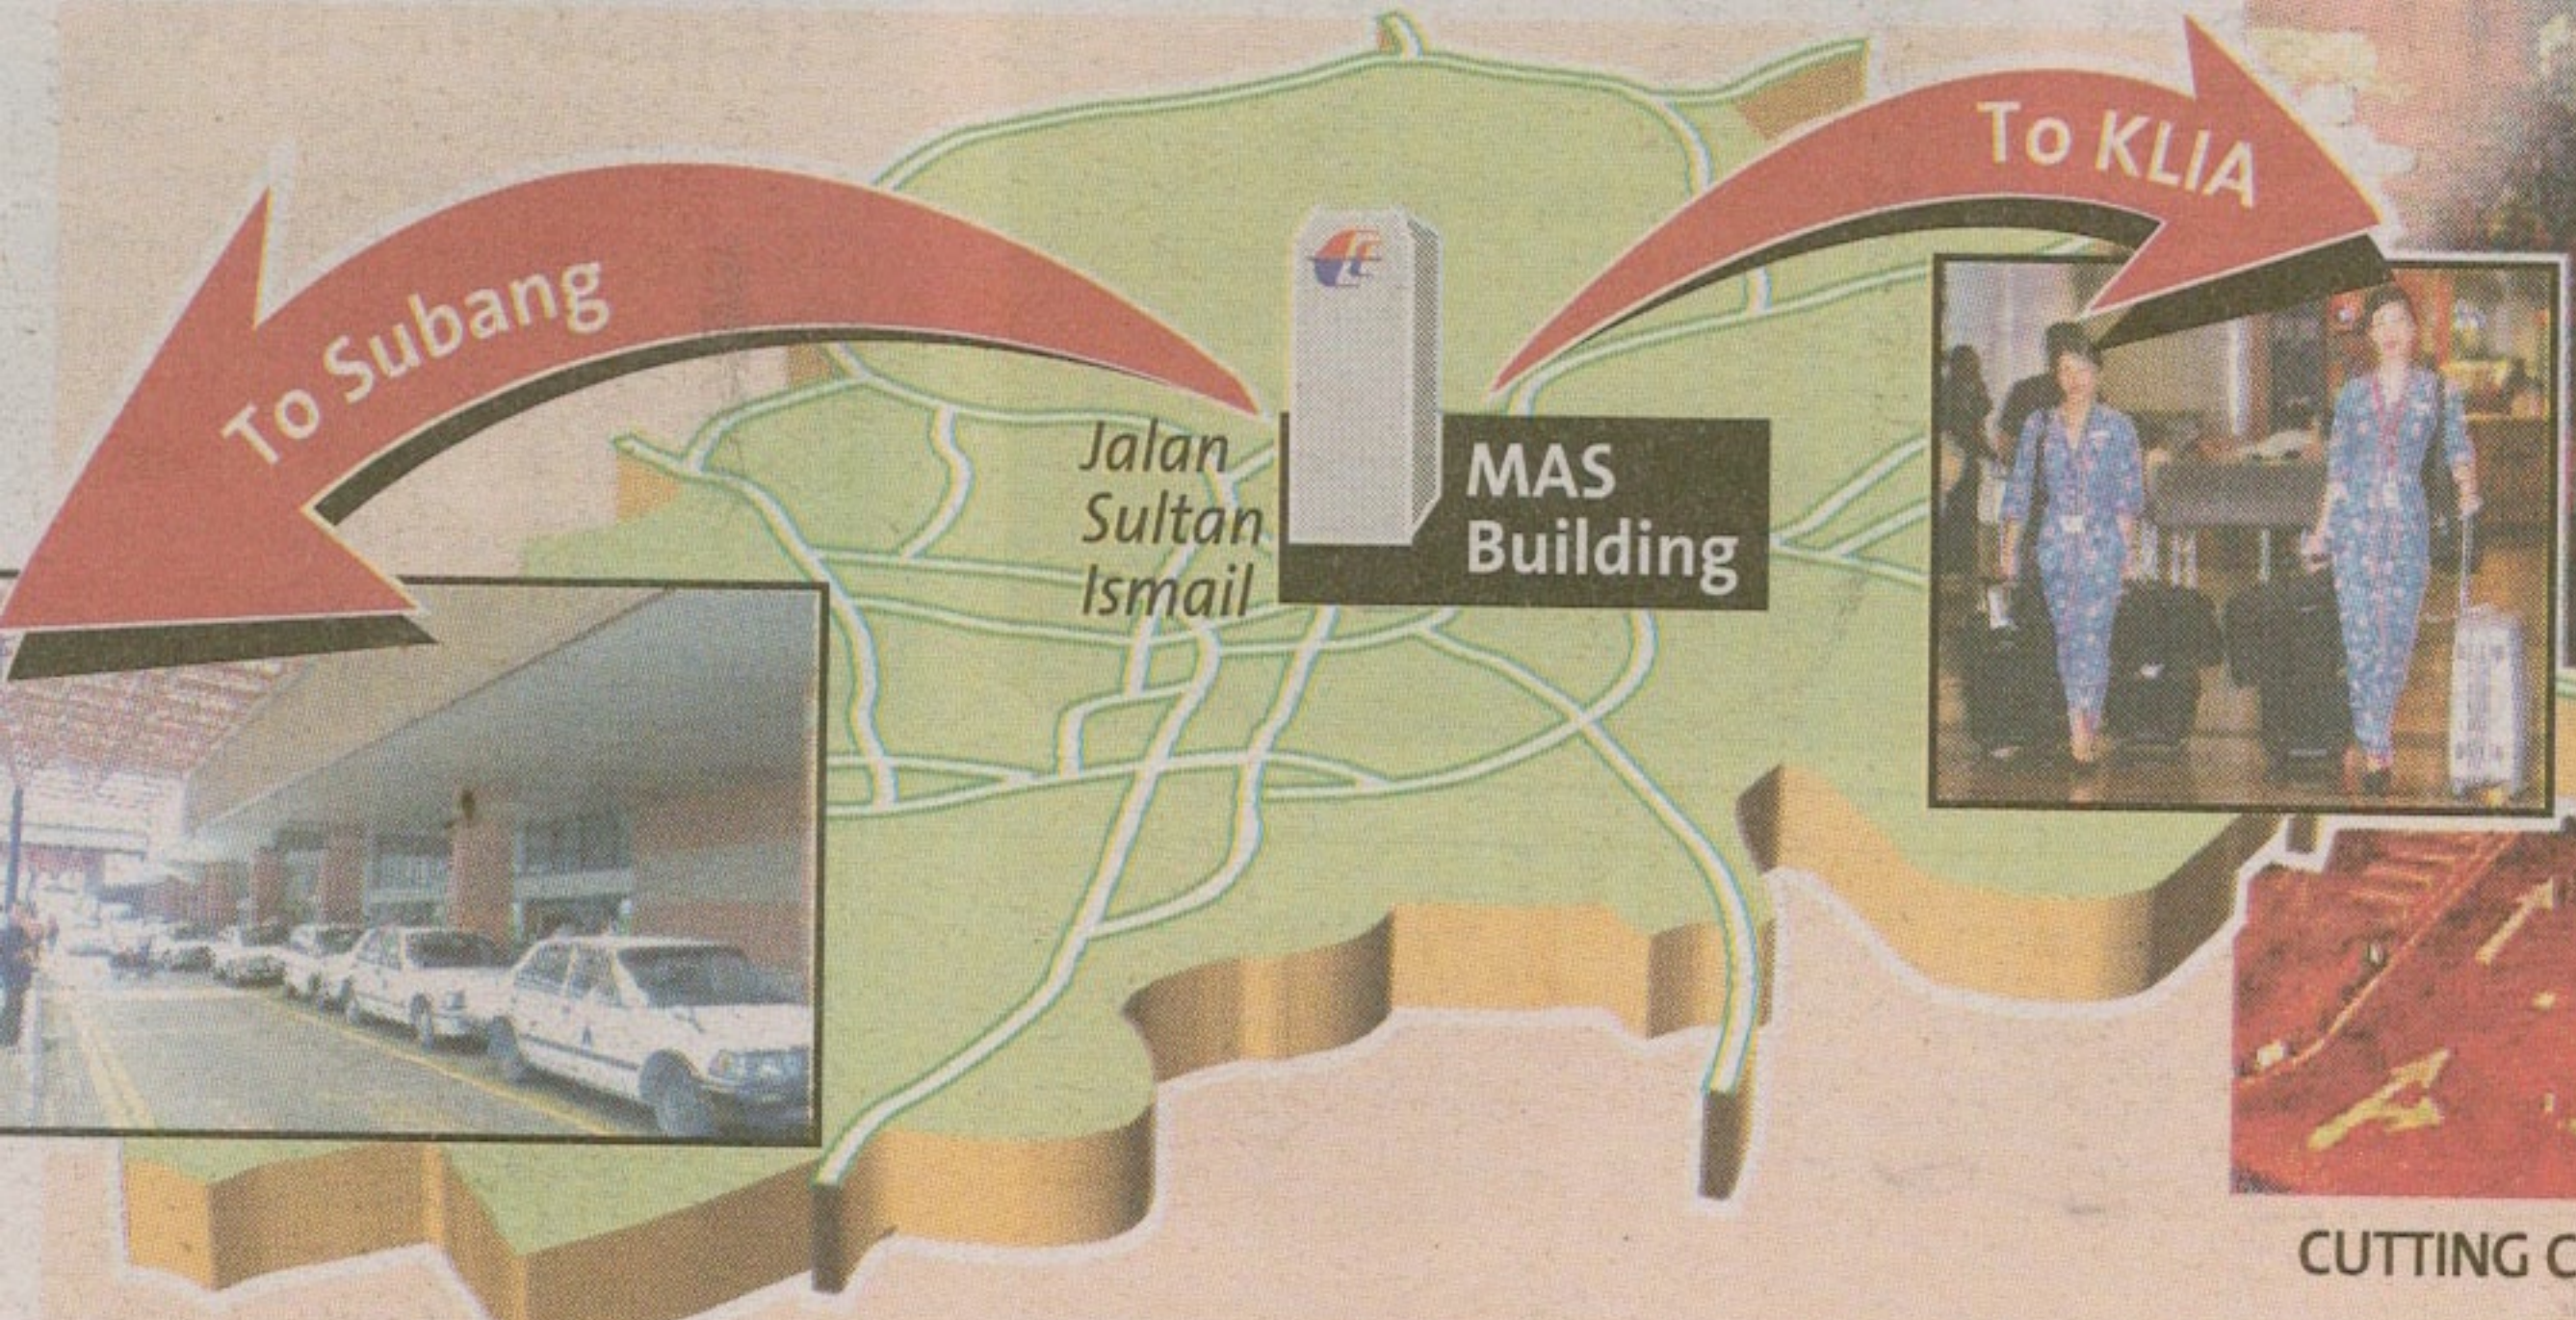

aging director are the executive director, company secretary, and the finance and corporate communications officers.

Phase one of the big shift will be from January to March.

The second phase will be in June when the sales, distribution and marketing divisions will also move into Administration Block Three.

Idris had earlier told senators that the airline was considering selling the headquarters building located in Jalan Sultan Ismail as part of plans to raise RM3bil to keep the national carrier afloat.
