KUALA LUMPUR: Datuk Seri Abdullah Ahmad said he is not a stubborn person who does not learn from lessons in life.

The Prime Minister said even in the worst of tragedies, there was always a blessing behind it and lessons to be learnt.

To a question on whether the election results showed that people were angry with him personally, Abdullah said: "Maybe, I do not know." He said as Barisan Nasional leader, he just had to see what would happen after this.

Abdullah said the Barisan government had always made decisions on the basis of consensus and thus shared collective responsibility for the collective decision.

"Some are good decisions, some might not be totally accepted by the Barisan supreme council meeting. Umno supreme council meeting follow press conference yesterday after the people into action," he told reporters. "We need to translate the aspiration to attention to."
