KUALA LUMPUR: Action movie star Arnold Schwarzenegger is on a 48-hour whirlwind tour of Kuala Lumpur and he hasn't had much time to see the city which he has heard so much about.

But using his famous catchphrase, Mr Terminator, who is here to speak at the inaugural Global Transformation Forum, said: "I'll be back, Kuala Lumpur!"

Schwarzenegger first used the line from the 1984 science fiction film, "The Terminator", and he has since used the same line, or some variant of it, in his subsequent movies.

The Global Transformation Forum is the first of its kind, which will see over 16 global key policy makers, corporate figures and experts on one stage.

The celebrity speaker is scheduled to speak today on "Discipline of Action" where he is likely to talk about the several stages of transformation in his life - from a body builder, an actor, a businessman and getting elected as a governor of California.

Powerhouse motivators: Pemandu CEO and BFR Institute managing director Datuk Seri Idris Jala, former Bolivian president Jorge Quiroga, former New Zealand premier Helen Clark, Arnold Schwarzenegger, former Australian prime minister Kevin Rudd, Prime Minister Datuk Seri Najib Tun Razak, former Singapore premier Goh Chok Tong, Olympic sprinter Carl Lewis and International Association of Athletics Federations president Lord Sebastian Coe at the dinner that followed the inaugural Global Transformation Forum in Kuala Lumpur.
