This consideration is in line with the society's aim to remain non-partisan for benefit of members who are government sponsored.

“With that in mind, we see no reason to justify why we should prevent Chung’s motion from being debated during our AGM, as it is non-partisan and should not be a detriment to the interests of the members of our society.

“We are also obliged by the student union’s policy regarding the freedom of thought and expression to allow Chung to propose and debate her motion at our AGM,” the committee said.

On the actual portrait itself, the committee also clarified that it was actually a long banner measuring over one metre tall, and also comprises photographs of other famous alumni.
