It takes time to develop Malaysia Baru, says DPM

KUALA LUMPUR

D EPUTY Prime Minister Datuk Seri Dr Wan Azizah Wan Ismail yesterday called on Malaysians to come together and develop Malaysia Baru (the new Malaysia) as the process cannot be achieved overnight.

She said the Malaysia Baru that was being formed would be the result of cooperation by every Malaysian and rejected religious and racial extremism.

"Malaysia Baru is about us together. Malaysia Baru that is being built is the result of the cooperation of every Malaysian.

"We reject all forms of religious and racial extremism.

"That is the formula of our Malaysia.

"I pray that the formula can be continued and strengthened," she said in her message in conjunction with Wesak Day, which falls today.

She said since Pakatan Harapan had taken over the government for only a year, it was too short for the people to see the changes brought about by it, compared with the previous government, which was in power for 61 years.

"All of you had taken your frustration to the ballot box and written history by changing the government for the first time ever since Malaysia's independence."

She said she understood the public's high hopes for the PH government and their expectation for change to be achieved fast.

Dr Wan Azizah prayed that Malaysians would set aside their differences for the good of the nation, and wished Buddhists a Happy Wesak Day.
