“Apart from that, it was also noted that the exchange rate of our ringgit must be adjusted so that the rakyat could benefit from it and not have it become a burden.

“At the moment, we are far from achieving this vision of mine, because we have misused our resources due to misguided policies. We have spent a lot of time on things that should not have mattered much,” he said.

“A cheaper ringgit proves to be dangerous as it may deem our assets as valueless in the future.

“What we can clearly take notice of is that the value of our ringgit has fallen drastically. I believe the government we have at the moment has not focused on increasing the value of our ringgit,” he pointed out.

The Gua Musang MP added that throughout his tenure as a politician, all he had hoped for and continues to hope for is to see Malaysians get the education and benefits that they deserve and for us to be more aware of our rights and the amenities available for us that will someday push us forward as a nation.

“We should be spending our resources on beneficial things such as building more schools, perfecting teacher training, bettering our healthcare facilities and what have we.

“I am a very optimistic man, and it is my hope that in the future, our young are better trained and better exposed so that we may be ahead of what we were before.”
