KUALA LUMPUR, Feb 15 (Bernama) -- The government has filtered sensitive defence information and areas before allowing public access to the Defence Geospatial Division of the Department of Survey and Mapping Malaysia (Jupem) online websites.

(Geospatial refers to the provision of geographic intelligence in support of national security)

Natural Resources and Environment Deputy Minister Tan Sri Joseph Kurup said Malaysia was internationally recognised for possessing the latest technology and effective methods to map geospatial for industry and defence usage.

"Before all information is showed to the public, any sensitive aspect would be filtered first, and this will always be the priority," he told reporters after launching an international symposium, 'Spatially Enabled Government and Society' here Wednesday.
