PUTRAJAYA, March 12 (Bernama) -- The Housing and Local Government Ministry will conduct a three-week "working laboratory" from March 26 to study the best incineration system for the country, its minister Datuk Seri Chor Chee Heung said.

During the period, he said, experts would conduct a detailed study on the best technology for a facility with a daily incineration capacity of 800 to 1,000 tonnes.

"Local experts will then study the best technology and the cheapest, and one that will not cause adverse effects on people's health," he told reporters after a special preview of the National Solid Waste Management Department's recycling campaign, here.

Also present was popular actress, Maya Karin, who was filmed in an advertisement for the campaign which will be aired on television and radio stations and streamed over the Internet starting Monday.

Meanwhile, the department's director-general Datuk Nadzri Yahaya said the laboratory would comprise about 50 participants, including experts from local universities, consultants and representatives of non-governmental organisations (NGOs).
