KOTA KINABALU: Malaysia has an excellent track record in managing a complex racial diversity to the extent that the various races in the country live in peace and harmony, said Datuk Seri Najib Tun Razak.

The Prime Minister said the success had created a conducive environment to spur development for the benefit and comfort of the people in the country.

"Although Malaysia has a very complex racial diversity, we have managed to handle it in an excellent manner.

"This is vastly different from the situation in some countries where the diversity is only in terms of religion or sect...there is no difference in skin colour but yet they cannot live in peace and harmony," he said here.

Najib said the development and progress enjoyed by the people was also due to the efforts of the present government which succeeded in ensuring political stability in the country which had been practising open democracy right from the start.
