KUALA LUMPUR, April 17 (Bernama - The government will study the possibility of releasing detainees under the Internal Security Act (ISA) after the bill that replaces it is enforced.

Minister Datuk Seri Hishammuddin Tun Hussein said he would study the matter as soon as possible adding the release of detainees would depend on the level of threat to national security.

"It is very important for us to relook at those being detained to see whether it is possible for us to release them as quick as possible.

"The criteria will always be in the interest of national security and public interest," he told reporters at parliament lobby here Tuesday.
