PUTRAJAYA, April 30 (Bernama) -- Workers in this country need to equip themselves to keep up with the changing world economic situation, which requires workers that are highly skilled, innovative and creative, said Human Resources Minister Datuk Seri Dr S. Subramaniam.

He said only innovative workers would be able to adapt to the fast-moving world economic spectrum.

"Hence, workers must take advantage of the opportunities available to improve themselves so that they will not lag behind in technological development and global development," he said in his Workers Day 2012 message, here, Monday.

He said "Innovative Workers the Catalysts for Transformation" had been chosen as the official theme for the 2012 Workers Day celebration in line with the government's earnest efforts in transforming Malaysia towards becoming a high-income nation by 2020.

"This theme was chosen because the changing world economy towards the third industrial revolution requires highly-skilled, innovative and creative workers."
