PETALING JAYA, May 15 (Bernama) -- Various platforms and programmes initiated for youths showed that the government is aware of the importance to engage and listen to the aspiration of youths who are the future leaders of the country said Tan Sri Muhyiddin Yassin.

Admitting that the youths of today were better informed and knew what they wanted, the Deputy Prime Minister said the Barisan Nasional (BN) government under Prime Minister Datuk Seri Najib Tun Razak had worked tirelessly to prepare various programmes for the development of youths.

He said the tireless efforts of the Prime Minister to go down to the ground and meet various groups of people, including the youths, is a clear message that what was sowed today would bear fruits for the future.

"Since the youths of today are smarter, better informed and know what they wanted, they can demand through various platforms that are made available for them to seek what they wanted.

"We want to engage, because the Prime Minister wants us (government servants) to always be in touch and prove that the era where youths and the government were miles apart, has past," he said when launching the National Youth Day celebrations here Tuesday.
