KUALA LUMPUR, July 7 (Bernama) -- Senate President Tan Sri Abu Zahar Ujang today opened a special workshop on the formulation of national laws and said the process of formulating good legislation begins at ministry level.

He said the ministry officers, particularly the legal advisor, would have to ensure the draft law presented to Parliament safeguards the people's interests.

These officers should have sufficient knowledge and experience to embrace the spirit of the law in proposing the formulation of legislation, he said when opening the Workshop on Formulating National Legislation at Parliament House, here.

"Before a draft legislation is produced, ministry officers need to make an in-depth study of the requirements of the law. They should look into the level of effectiveness of the law to the country.

"Ministry officers should study the current environment. We want to see only good laws passed by Parliament," he said. Also present was Senate Deputy President Doris Sophia Brodi.
