KUALA LUMPUR, March 28 (Bernama) -- Prime Minister Datuk Seri Najib Tun Razak said a strong government was necessary to accelerate the transformation process in the country.

He said Malaysia could not afford having a weak government as it would cause instability and uncertainty.

"Strong government necessary to accelerate process of transformation in Malaysia. Weak government means instability and uncertainty. Something we cannot afford," he said in his latest tweet Thursday.

After almost three years of their introduction, the government and economic transformation agendas of the prime minister have shown positive outcomes in supporting Malaysia's vision to emerge as a high-income developed nation in 2020.

Najib's performance was also praised recently by former finance minister Tun Daim Zainuddin who called on the people to give Najib a fresh five-year mandate.

Saying that Najib had done a "fairly good job", Daim said the prime minister should be given a chance to continue with and deliver on his transformation policies.
