Political activist Hishammuddin Rais urged the crowd in Brickfields not to provoke police but to wave to them in a friendly manner as they march 1.5km towards Padang Merbok, in the heart of the Malaysian capital.

At the Sogo department store in Jalan Raja Laut, PKR vice-president Tian Chua stressed that the time for change is now. "The public cannot wait for another five years," he said to loud cheers to a crowd of more than 500.

He then trained his guns at the Election Commission, urging them to step down today for "stealing" the elections from Pakatan Rakyat.

"The EC has to respond to our demand to step down now.

"Come to Padang Merbok and do it, or declare to the media today."

The rally supporters are forging on despite the apparent haze with an air pollutant reading in Kuala Lumpur as at 11am, is between 78 (recorded at Batu Muda) and 82 (at Cheras). - June 22, 2013.
