IPOH: Barisan Nasional chairman Datuk Seri Najib Tun Razak said the key to survival and success of a nation is by sharing a common philosophy based on the concept of moderation.

He said Barisan believed in such a concept, which is what the coalition was about.

Najib said he agreed with former premier Tun Dr Mahathir Mohamad, that the sharing of power between Malay, Chinese and Indians allowed peace and harmony in this multi-racial country.

"Sharing power is one thing, but sharing a common philosophy is equally important.

"When there is a party that practices extremism, do you think they can form a viable government?"

"Malaysians must reject all forms of extremism and reject those who play the racial card," he said after addressing Chinese non-governmental organisations at the Tow Boh Keong temple here Tuesday.

He said if Barisan was given a stronger mandate then real changes and progress would be seen, and the best was yet to come.
