Johor Bahru DAP division secretary Alan Tang claimed that his identity on Facebook was forged.

He strongly denied posting a Hari Raya greeting that had a roast pork dish on Facebook.

The alleged image showed a roasted pig head alongside lemang and ketupat was posted yesterday, riling up the Muslim community.

Tang said "have been so dumb to produce such a greeting", reported by Free Malaysia Today.

"I'm the one always advising my friends and comrades against touching on issues pertaining to race, religion and royalty, and it is even more impossible for me to do it myself," he said.

A print screen of his alleged Facebook account with the food image was circulated on the Internet. But, after looking into Tang's account, the greeting could not be found.

"If you notice on my Facebook, I have never posted an image, I only use words. I suspect that someone forged my name and taken my profile photo to create a phantom account.

"They would use the account to upload the image, print screen it, and spread it," he said.

Tang did a search to find the alleged Facebook account after receiving a call from a stranger on Thursday morning.

He had provided police with the information that afternoon.

"This is a malicious political attacks, I am not sure whether they are targeting me or the DAP," he said. – August, 10, 2013.
