PETALING JAYA – After more than a month, the most sophisticated technology, equipment, satellite and large multinational manpower has failed to locate the missing Malaysia Airlines MH370 and its 239 passengers and crew.

Self-proclaimed Raja Bomoh Sedunia (World Shaman King), Ibrahim Mat Zin has announced that he will go to Australia to help the search and rescue team find the missing MH370.

In the latest video posting www.suaratv.com, Ibrahim said that according to his bamboo telescope, the 239 passengers and crew are nearby, in any of three islands either in Australia or United States.

“I don’t know where the islands are, but they (three islands) are either located in Australia or United States.

“I put my efforts (find MH370) at Pulau Sembilan. When I pulled on the bamboo, I noticed there was no ‘magnetic reaction’.

“According to my divination as Raja Bomoh, all of them (239 passengers and crew) are still alive, in the air or at the island but not in the ocean.

“I call upon all Malaysian’s, doesn’t matter what race, according to your own beliefs, please pray for an early finding of the victims. If possible be with me praying for them everyday and all the time.”

“I will leave for Australia or go to the location they (the multinational navy and air force) are searching.

“I hope that science and technology and Malay traditional beliefs can work together, like the right hand and left hand to lift a weight (searching for the MH370).

“I hope all Malaysians, Muslims and non-Muslims pray together. Don’t blame each other,” Suara TV quoted Ibrahim as saying.

Raja Bomoh made world news when flight MH370 went missing and he showcased his wizardly methods for locating the missing plane.

His first performance was a ritual held at the Kuala Lumpur International Airport where he ‘searched’ for MH370 using a bamboo telescope and fish trap (bubu).

It was during his second performance also at the KLIA, two days later, that he received coverage from the international media, again he used a bamboo telescope, two coconuts, a basket and a carpet.

Two weeks ago he took a boat ride to Pulau Sembilan in the Straits of Malacca in search of MH370, and at that time, Ibrahim said that the plane had crashed into the Indian Ocean.

Ibrahim's ritual of using a bamboo telescope, coconuts and a carpet became a phenomenon in Malaysia and worldwide when everyone started to imitate and ridicule his rituals.

Will Ibrahim's fourth attempt to find MH370 while he is in Australia bring good news to Malaysians and the families of the 239 passengers and crew?

Using his expertise to work 'hand in hand' with science and technology (navy and air force), will the Search and Rescue (SAR) team from Australia, United States, China, Japan, United Kingdom, New Zealand, Malaysia and other countries be able to finally locate the missing MH370 with Raja Bomoh's help?

All eyes are now on Raja Bomoh. To avoid further embarrassment for the nation he needs to deliver.

Now it is the Aussie's turn to get a dose of Raja Bomoh's antics.
