As the search for missing Malaysia Airlines flight MH370 enters its 100th day today, Prime Minister Datuk Seri Najib Razak reiterated Malaysia's commitment to continue searching for the missing Boeing 777.

"On this 100th day since MH370 went missing, remembering those on board and their families, Malaysia remains committed to the search effort," Najib said in a tweet.

Flight MH370 carrying 227 passengers and 12 crew members disappeared from radar while en route to Beijing at 1.21am on March 8.

On March 24, Najib announced that the flight ended in a remote part of the Indian Ocean, based on the findings of British satellite company Inmarsat and the UK Air Accidents Investigation Branch.

Malaysia has spent almost RM27.6 million so far in the search for the missing plane.
