Higher Education Minister Datuk Seri Idris Jusoh yesterday denied saying that people should not send their children to government schools if they were against the Barisan Nasional (BN) government.

"I have never issued a statement with such a sentiment," he said in a statement.

Idris said what he had said was: "If there are people who say the system is not good and want to send children abroad, we have no objection, but I will ensure our education system will be further improved."

He added that his statement had been manipulated by a news portal with the aim of tarnishing his name, the then-Education Ministry and the government. – Bernama, August 7, 2015.
