MOSCOW, Oct 2 (Bernama) -- Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov and his Chinese counterpart Wang Yi discussed measures to counter the Islamic State (IS) terrorist organisation and settlement in Syria on Sept Wednesday, the Russian Foreign Ministry said Thursday.

The two met on the sidelines of the United Nations General Assembly in New York, Russia's TASS news agency reported.

The ministers discussed the situation in the Middle East, including stepping up the fight against IS and other terrorist groups as well the political issue in Syria.

They also exchanged opinions on the situation in North-Eastern Asia, the foreign ministry said.

The ministers confirmed they were satisfied with the level of cooperation between Russia and China in the framework of the United Nations Organisation and spoke in favour of developing cooperation.
