The country's "suffocating" politics will lead to national disunity, says Umno deputy president Tan Sri Muhyiddin Yassin, where the people will suffer in the end.

The people were also victims of political instability because of corruption and the economic downturn, said the former deputy prime minister.

"Our politics is becoming even more suffocating. It is because of the chaotic political climate. This can disunite the country and the people.

"Our internal political problems include corruption and the economic downturn where the people become victims and are made to pay the price," Muhyiddin said as reported in Malay-language daily Sinar Harian today.

He added that Malaysia's world standing was not good given the issues related to the leadership.

"Our country is under threat because of issues involving the leaders.

"Malaysia is no longer viewed as stable in the international area and this is having an impact on the people.

"With the country in the spotlight over these issues, people are facing hardship, especially in business and investments," the Sinar Harian quoted him as saying during a speech in Pagoh yesterday. – February 11, 2016.
