Pump prices for fuel will drop further for February between 10 and 25 sen per litre, the Malaysian Petronas Petrol Station Operators Association said tonight.

The price of RON95 will be reduced by 10 sen to RM1.75 per litre, while RON97 fuel will be RM2.05 per litre (a 20 sen drop) and diesel RM1.35 per litre (a 25 sen drop).

The prices will be effective midnight, the association announced through national news agency Bernama.

Putrajaya has removed fuel subsidies since December 1 and is setting the retail price of fuel each month using a managed float system.

The price of Brent crude in early January was at its lowest in 12 years near US$30 per barrel, and was at around US$34 in the last week of the month. – January 31, 2016.
