KUALA LUMPUR, June 27 (Bernama) -- Back in 2013, British Prime Minister David Cameron announced in his speech in front of the European partners that he would hold an in-out of EU referendum.

In his speech, he declared: "It is time for the British people to have their say. It is time for us to settle this question about Britain and Europe."

The pledge did not stop there when he vowed to hold a referendum on Europe if he won the 2015 election during an interview with BBC's Andrew Marr Show in 2014.

"I will not become prime minister unless I can guarantee that we can hold that referendum," he said during the show.....
